

INSURANCE PRACTICE

In addition to being retained by insurance companies to represent their insureds, the firm is often called upon to provide opinions regarding insurance coverage issues and to advise insurers regarding preservation of their rights to contest such issues. When an incorrect analysis can result in liability for the insured's own attorney's fees, a solid legal opinion upon which the insurer can rely is crucial.

The firm is exceptionally qualified to provide superior and responsive legal analysis concerning matters of coverage and the modification of policy language. Those attorneys who practice in this area are well-versed in policy interpretation and constantly update the firm's research regarding statutory changes and the most recent appellate decisions.

The firm has considerable expertise in successfully initiating and defending declaratory and other first-party actions involving automobile, property, health, life and disability insurance claims. The firm also advises carriers in avoiding liability for bad faith and has trial experience in defending bad faith litigation.
